1. Our website, courses, content, and services are directed towards accurately representing the information provided within the website. By using our website and our services by following any link you are acknowledging that you are participating in your own free will in using our website and using any of our services. You submit, affirm and confirm that you'll use your own due diligence and judgment before using our website and attaining any services from us. Further, you'll do the same before relying on any information provided by or through our website.
2. Investments in financial markets, cryptocurrencies, stocks, bonds, securities, and hedge funds are speculative and involve significant risks including illiquidity, heightened potential for loss, and lack of transparency. The environment for private equity investments is increasingly volatile and competitive, and an investor should only invest in the fund if the investor can withstand a total loss. In light of the fact that there are restrictions on withdrawals, transfers, and redemptions, and the funds are not registered under the securities laws of any jurisdictions, an investment in the funds will be illiquid. Investors should be prepared to bear the financial risks of their investments for an indefinite period of time.
